While in law school, Nicholas participated in the Staton Intramural Moot Court Competition. He completed a research paper analyzing Chevron deference, a judicial doctrine that allows Courts to defer to a federal agency's reasonable interpretation of an ambiguous statute, (Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984)) and its implications for the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), including the potential consequences of Chevron's overturning (Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo, 144 S. Ct. 2244 (2024)) on the broader principle of deference to administrative agencies in their regulatory interpretations and actions.

Nicholas graduated with high distinction from Indiana University in May 2022, earning a Bachelor of Arts degree in History. During his time at Indiana University, Nicholas was admitted to the History Department Honors Program and was recognized as an Indiana University Founders Scholar in both 2021 and 2022. He was also a member of the History Undergraduate Student Association. His academic focus was post-Soviet conflict, with his primary research exploring the geopolitical, historical, economic, religious, and racial factors that contributed to the outbreak of the First Chechen War. His research culminated in an honors thesis, which provided a comprehensive analysis of the First Chechen War through a multidisciplinary lens. In addition to his thesis, Nicholas researched and wrote about subjects including Stalinist Repression and the Gulag System, the Hundred Years War, the Albigensian Crusade, and the works of Fyodor Dostoevsky.

Nicholas volunteers at Saint Simon the Apostle Catholic Church. He is an avid fan of rugby and Indiana University sports.
